Family game night ideas · host’s turns

Imposter: Choose a familiar category and deal private cards on phones or with a paper dealer who sits out. Give a clue per speaker, discuss, and vote together. A caught imposter gets a final guess; finish at the revealed outcome.

Most Likely To: Choose kind questions and a reader. Read a phrase, then vote on phones or point together on paper. Share tied leading picks with at least two votes each; below two votes there is no pick, and it stays scoreless. End after every willing guest has read or after the current phone reveal.

Secret Draft: Give everyone the same pretend budget and choose a free category. Reveal items for sealed bids until lineups are full, then hear each pitch and vote for another lineup. Use money left to break vote ties and share exact ties.

Imposter · rules for the dealer

You need 3–12 players, matching slips, a pencil, and a dealer who sits out.

1. Everyone sees the secret word, except the imposter.
2. Take turns saying one word about it, out loud.
3. Vote out the imposter, who can still win by guessing the word.

+1 if you vote for the imposter. +3 to the imposter for getting away or guessing the word.

The dealer sits out. For the number playing, select that many matching cards: an IMPOSTER card and enough secret-word cards for everyone else. Use the extra fill-in sheet above 9 players; leave unused cards aside. Write the same word on every crew card with the same pen, shuffle face down, and announce the category. Each player gives a spoken clue, then everyone points simultaneously at another player. A tied top vote or no votes lets the imposter escape. A caught imposter makes a final spoken guess; this paper variation replaces the phone game's answer choices. Apply the scoring line above, including right-vote points when the imposter guesses correctly. Rotate the dealer after the reveal.

Most Likely To · picks, never points

Set spare cards aside. Read “Who is most likely to…?” and a phrase. Count down aloud and point together; self-votes are allowed. A pick needs at least two votes; if nobody reaches two, there is no pick. Tied leaders share only when each has at least two votes. No points. Passes are welcome. Change readers and end after each guest has read or passed.

Secret Draft · paper bidding rules

Give every player a bid tracker and matching bid scraps. Each starts with $20 in pretend party money and aims for 3 items. Choose enough distinct items to fill every lineup.

A dealer reveals an item. Eligible players write a bid within their remaining budget and reveal together. The highest bid wins and pays that amount. For tied top bids, draw a folded name slip among those bidders. Mark the item, spending, and balance on the tracker.

After winning an item for the current pick, a player waits until everyone has an item. The final eligible player receives that pick's item for nothing. Begin the next pick; stop bidding once all lineups are full.

Let each player pitch, then point simultaneously at another lineup. Rank by votes received, then party money left; exact ties share the win. No votes means no winners or points. Apply the scoring line below. This paper version has spoken reveals instead of phone timers.

+3 for the best lineup. +1 if you voted for it.
