Christmas party games for families · host's turns

Holiday charades: Shuffle the printed action cards by the level guests want. A player acts without speaking while neighbors guess, then reveals or passes the card. Count solved cards together and finish when every willing guest has acted.

Christmas Most Likely To: Put the holiday phrases with a reader. Read a phrase, then count down to a simultaneous point, including self-votes. Tied leading guests share the pick with at least two votes each; below two votes there is no pick, and no points are added. End once everyone has read or passed.

A holiday Imposter secret: A dealer writes a web-list holiday word on matching cards and adds an IMPOSTER card, then sits out. Deal privately, clue around the circle, and vote together. Resolve ties as escapes and give a caught imposter a spoken guess before ending.

Who is most likely to...?

Set spare cards aside. Read “Who is most likely to...?” and a phrase. Count down aloud and point together; self-votes are allowed. A pick needs at least two votes; if nobody reaches two, there is no pick. Tied leaders share only when each has at least two votes. No points. Passes are welcome. Change readers and end after each guest has read or passed.

Imposter · rules for the dealer

You need 3–12 players, matching slips, a pencil, and a dealer who sits out.

1. Everyone sees the secret word, except the imposter.
2. Take turns saying one word about it, out loud.
3. Vote out the imposter, who can still win by guessing the word.

+1 if you vote for the imposter. +3 to the imposter for getting away or guessing the word.

The dealer sits out. For the number playing, select that many matching cards: an IMPOSTER card and enough secret-word cards for everyone else. Use the extra fill-in sheet above 9 players; leave unused cards aside. Write the same word on every crew card with the same pen, shuffle face down, and announce the category. Each player gives a spoken clue, then everyone points simultaneously at another player. A tied top vote or no votes lets the imposter escape. A caught imposter makes a final spoken guess; this paper variation replaces the phone game's answer choices. Apply the scoring line above, including right-vote points when the imposter guesses correctly. Rotate the dealer after the reveal.
